II ABOUT BIBHUPAD

Bibhupad is the sort of person whose accomplishments arrive in conversation only when someone else mentions them. He grew up in a household where the day still begins with a small prayer and ends with a phone call home, and he has carried that rhythm into his life in Bengaluru — engineer by day, devoted son and steady friend by evening.

He reads widely, walks before sunrise, follows cricket the way only an Indian engineer can, and is happiest cooking a simple meal for the people he loves. He listens more than he speaks, and laughs easily once he knows you. Friends describe him as grounded, dependable and quietly ambitious — a man who keeps his word, his promises and his composure.

In a partner he hopes to find a thoughtful equal: someone with her own pursuits and opinions, who values family, can hold a slow conversation over chai, and is excited about building a home that is modern in outlook and traditional in spirit.

III VALUES & INTERESTS

i. Family before everything

Sundays are for parents, festivals are not negotiable, and big decisions are taken at the dinner table.

iii. Lifelong curiosity

Reads non-fiction and Odia poetry in equal measure; tinkers with hardware on weekends.

v. Cricket & classical music

A reliable Test-match companion, with a soft spot for Odissi and Hindustani vocal in the evenings.

ii. Quiet discipline

Early mornings, daily walks, and a steady routine that has held since college.

iv. Travel, slowly

Prefers a week in one place to a country in a week. Recent corners — Hampi, Coorg, Puri, Spiti.

vi. A modern, equal home

Cooks, cleans, plans — believes a marriage is two careers, two voices, one household.

VI FAMILY

Bibhupad is the younger of two children in a settled, well-respected Odia Brahmin family from Berhampur, Odisha — a household where books, service and quiet hospitality have always shared the same shelf.

His father is a retired civil servant whose career in public administration shaped the family's values of discipline and integrity. His mother anchors the home. His elder sister is happily married and settled, leaving the family experienced in welcoming a new member with warmth and care.
